OF BILATERAL AND MULTILATERAL INTERSTATE AGREEMENTS
IN THE FIELD OF PREVENTION AND ELIMINATION OF EMERGENCIES WITH THE PARTICIPATION OF CENTRAL ASIAN COUNTRIES

INTRODUCTION

The Central Asian region, with more than 80 million inhabitants, is exposed to almost all types of natural and man-made threats, including earthquakes, floods, landslides, mudflows, avalanches, droughts, extreme temperatures, epidemics, dam breaks and releases of hazardous substances.

Natural disasters, accidents and catastrophes, especially of large-scale and transboundary nature, negatively affect the results of investments in the economies of the region, which impedes the more successful implementation of sustainable development strategies, programs and plans.

Governments of Central Asian countries,

Taking into account the possibility of emergencies of a large-scale and cross-border nature, the consequences of which cannot always be eliminated by the forces and means of one country, recognizing the need for the joint use of rescue forces, material, technical, medical, food, financial and information resources for the implementation of measures to prevent and eliminate emergencies, intending to maintain and develop the scientific and technical relations in solving the problems of preventing and eliminating the consequences of emergencies, recognizing the objective need for coordinated actions to use and develop a transport communications network for the needs of the economy, military and humanitarian transportation, recognizing that cooperation in the field of prevention and elimination of emergencies will help to ensure the protection of the population and territories, the welfare and security of the countries of the region, based on the interdependence of ecological systems, requiring a coordinated policy on the prevention and elimination of emergencies, as well as the organization of environmental monitoring, willing to extend the principles of regional cooperation to emergency assistance and making joint efforts to provide effective and coordinated assistance to the affected population, striving to strengthen traditionally friendly relations between people of their states, comprehensive development of interstate and international relations and comprehensive collaboration and cooperation between Central Asian countries, supporting the efforts of the UN in the field of international assistance in case of emergency and taking measures to form an effective international legal framework, agreed on interaction and cooperation, taking joint coordinated actions in the field of prevention and elimination of emergencies through the conclusion of bilateral and multilateral interstate Agreements.

The “Review on bilateral and multilateral interstate agreements in the field of prevention and elimination of emergencies with the participation of Central Asian countries” is developed by the Center for Emergency Situations and Disaster Risk Reduction in Almaty.

This Review is developed in order to assist practically to specialists-experts of State authorities, international and non-governmental organizations, scientific institutions to plan and implement organizational and practical measures in the field of disaster risk reduction, prevention and elimination of emergencies based on the use of current international legal framework, including bilateral and multilateral interstate agreements ratified by Central Asian countries.
